ARRANGEMENTS

That they have endeavored to discharge the duty assigned to them, in a manner at once befitting the occasion, and demanded of them by the unanimous expression of the public voice; and if they have, in any respect, fallen short of what may have been justly expected of them as the representatives of the City of New York, they earnestly assure the Common Council that such failure has not arisen from a want of due appreciation of the solemnity of the trust confided to them, or of the just expectations of their fellow citizens.

Immediately after their appointment, your Committee were waited upon by a Committee of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, consisting of Aldermen March, Oakley, Hart, Cross, and Burbank, who expressed a desire to unite with your Committee, on behalf of the City of Brooklyn, in the proposed arrangements; to which desire your Committee readily and cheerfully assented. They then, in conjunction with the Committee of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, proceeded to consider the subject referred to them, and on the 6th of April, instant, they unanimously adopted the following resolutions, which were proposed by Alderman Benson, and directed them to be published in the papers of the day :

That the bells of the several churches in the two cities, and fire alarm bells, be tolled from noon till 2 o'clock, P. M., and that 68 minute guns (being the number of years of the late President) be fired from the Battery, and also from such place in the City of Brooklyn, as the Committee from that city may designate. That the owners and masters of vessels in the harbor, and the proprietors of all public places in the said cities are requested to display their flags at half-mast during the whole day, and that our fellow citizens are requested to wear the usual badge of mourning for sixty days.

Resolved, That the Common Councils of the Cities of New York and Brooklyn will solemnize the death of the late President of the United States, by a civic and military procession, to be composed of the military and different societies and citizens of our respective cities, and that such procession take place on Saturday next.

Immediately after the appointment of your Committee, the co-operation of the military and of the various civic associations, and of our citizens generally, was tendered in aid of the proposed solemnities ; and in order to meet their views, sub-committees were appointed by your Committee, to make the necessary arrangements in that behalf. The Committee on the military consisted of Aldermen Peers, Nash and Underwood, of New York, and Cross and Burbank, of Brooklyn ; and on the civic societies and associations, of Aldermen Graham, Pollock and Wood, of New York, and Oakley and March, of Brooklyn.

It was also, on motion of Assistant Alderman Davies,

A communication was received at the same meeting of the Committee from the Veteran Corps of Artillery, which was accepted, and which was as follows :

MEETING OF THE BAR.

Pursuant to public notice, the Members of the Bar assembled in the Superior Court Room, on Saturday, the 10th of April, 1841, at eleven o'clock.

Hiram Ketchum called the meeting to order, and on his nomination, David B. Ogden was appointed President.

On motion of the Hon. John McKeon, M. C., Daniel Lord, jun., and Charles O'Connor, were appointed Vice Presidents ; and on motion of Henry W. Warner, William H. Harison, and James T. Brady, were appointed Secretaries of the meeting.

(Mr. Brady being absent from indisposition, George B. Butler was appointed by the officers of the meeting to act in his stead.)

James R. Whiting, the District Attorney of the City and County of New York, moved the following resolutions, which were passed unanimously, viz. :

Resolved, That the Bar of New York fully participate in the unfeigned sorrow which the death of our Chief Magistrate has spread through the nation.

Resolved, That when the political head of any people is called away by death from his eminent position, it behoves the people over whom he was placed solemnly to consider the uncertainty of human life, and the vanity of earthly distinctions ; but in view of the decided and warm manifestations of public confidence which attended the elevation of our late Chief Magistrate to office, the flattering evidences of popular favor with which he entered upon his duties, the brevity of his term, and the sudden and unexpected manner in which he was torn from the warm embraces of his fellow citizens, and united to the band of the illustrious dead, we find cause for the profoundest meditation.

Resolved, That however we may have been divided in the late political contest, we now remember WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, only as an Illustrious American—our Countryman ; one called by the voice of a free and intelligent people to the highest political distinction on earth, and suddenly summoned by the Ruler of Nations to surrender that post ; as Americans, forgetting all minor distinctions, we are one in sorrow, and unitedly mingle our tears over the grave of the deceased.

Resolved, That we will wear the usual badge of mourning, and this day join the funeral procession.

On motion of John Cleaveland it was

Resolved, That we join the funeral procession, headed by the Officers of the meeting and the mover of the foregoing resolutions, and marshalled by the Secretaries; and that the members be arranged as nearly in the order of seniority as may be.

Upwards of two hundred and fifty gentlemen of the bar, almost all in full mourning, in addition to many other members of the profession who officiated as pall-bearers, marshal of the day and his assistants, and in other stations, civil and military, then formed in procession: the Secretaries bearing staves of office covered with black crape.

Gentlemen—The communication by which, as a Committee of the Common Councils of the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, you have invited the Governor of the State, his suite, and the Heads of Departments, to unite in the funeral solemnities to be observed in the City of New York, on the occasion of the death of WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, President of the United States, has been received.

Be pleased to tender to the Common Council our acknowledgments for this mark of their consideration, and to assure them, that, deeply affected by the sad event which has involved the nation in mourning, and entertaining a very high respect for the Public Authorities and citizens of New York and Brooklyn, it would be very grateful to our feelings to accept their invitation.

The Legislature, however, having had this afflicting bereavement under consideration, and adopted suitable arrangements for celebrating funeral honors on the occasion; and the Municipal Authorities of this City having assigned a day for a similar observance, it seems most appropriate that the Officers of the State, resident here, should unite with the Legislature and their fellow citizens in the obsequies to be performed at this Capital.

We are, very respectfully,

Your obedient Servants,

To this communication, no official reply has been received, but the following proceedings appear, from the State paper, to have been taken upon it in the Senate :

LEGISLATURE OF NEW YORK.

IN SENATE, APRIL 9, 1841.

Prayer by the Rev. Mr. LEVINGS.

An invitation was received from the Joint Committee of the Common Councils of New York and Brooklyn.

Mr. Taylor reported on the communication from the Joint Committee of the Common Councils of the City of New York and Brooklyn, and submitted the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted :

Resolved, That the President of the Senate be requested to respond in suitable terms to the invitation of the Common Councils of the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, to unite with them in the funeral solemnities to take place in the City of New York, on Saturday, the 10th instant, on occasion of the death of WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, late President of the United States—to assure them of the deep sympathy of this body in the National bereavement—that the Senate have already made the appropriate arrangements for the funeral solemnities on this mournful occasion, and that their public duties deny to them the opportunity of mingling their condolence with their fellow citizens of New York and Brooklyn.

On motion of Mr. H. A. Livingston, it was resolved that when the Senate adjourns, it adjourn to meet on Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

On motion of Mr. Lee the Senate then adjourned.

Committee on behalf of the Citizens of Brooklyn.

The arrangements which were proposed by the Committee were carried out, as appears by the following official report from the Grand Marshal, with the exception of the delivery of the Oration, which was necessarily dispensed with, in consequence of the inclemency of the weather :

SIR—I have the honor of reporting to the Committee of the Honorable the Common Council of the City of New York, a detailed account of the execution of the Programme of Arrangements adopted by the Committee, and submitted to be carried out under my orders, with the assistance of such Aids as I might deem proper to select for the purpose. It will be perceived, that the names of several gentlemen appeared attached to Divisions in the early publication of the programme, whose names do not appear in the execution—the discrepancy was owing to the inability of those first selected to do duty—others will immediately be selected whose names appear at the head of the Divisions. Permit me to assure you that if the execution of the Programme of Arrangements of the Funeral Obsequies in honor of the late WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, President of the United States, meet the Committee's approval, the credit of the execution is due to the Aids selected.

I am respectfully yours,

ROBERT BOGARDUS,

Grand Marshal.

GENERAL ORDER.

City Hall, April 9th, 1841.

The Aids to the Grand Marshal will assemble at the Assistant Vice Chancellor's room, City Hall, on Saturday morning, at 30 minutes past 9 precisely.

The Grand Marshal will receive his Staff, at his quarters, No. 501 Broadway, at 10 o'clock precisely.

It is expected that the Staff will be punctual in attendance.

By order.

S. D. JACKSON, Sec'y.

ROBERT BOGARDUS,

Grand Marshal.

The various public bodies, associations and societies, assembled in large numbers, at an early hour, in accordance with the published arrangements of the Joint Committees.

Precisely at the hour indicated in the programme of arrangements, all the civic societies, public associations, and invited guests, were in readiness to commence the movement. The several Aids, heretofore named, having charge of the various divisions, promptly reported to the Grand Marshal, and the procession moved forward in the order prescribed in the preceding programme.

The movement commenced by the passage of the military escort, preceded by the Grand Marshal, from Broadway, in front of the City Hall, through Chatham street.

The URN was placed on a bier in front of the Hall, and received the funeral honors of the corps on the March. When the first division had passed, the urn was borne to its station in the second Division, under an Escort of Marines, and followed by a WHITE STEED, caparisoned in full mourning equipments.

The route of the procession was through Chatham street, East Broadway, Grand street, the Bowery, Fourteenth street and Broadway, to the Park, at which place it arrived about five o'clock, P. M.

Upon the arrival of the head of the procession at the Park, the military escort were formed in line on Broadway, and reviewed by the Grand Marshal. Each Division, as it reached the Park, was reviewed, and placed under the sole direction of the Aid by whom it was led. This deviation from the original programme became necessary in consequence of the severe inclemency of the weather.

Several Divisions filed into the Park, and witnessed the closing of the ceremonies in front of the Hall, where a requiem was sung by the Sacred Music Society.

The solemnities were opened by prayer by the Reverend Doctor Cox, of the City of Brooklyn, and closed by a benediction from the Right Reverend Bishop Onderdonk.

The delivery of the contemplated funeral oration, by the Honorable Theodore Frelinghuysen, Chancellor of the University, was prevented by the state of the weather.

The bells of the various churches in New York and Brooklyn were tolled during the movement of the procession: all the vessels in port wore their flags at half-mast, from sun-rise to sun-set; minute guns were fired by corps especially designated for that purpose; various public buildings, and many private residences, on the route of the procession, were appropriately decorated with the insignia of mourning.

The various military orders issued by the Commander-in-Chief, and the Officers in command of the several Divisions in this city, will appear in another place.

At a meeting of the Civic Staff, held at the Mayor's Office, City Hall, on Friday, the 16th instant, in the absence of General Bogardus, the Grand Marshal, William Samuel Johnson, Esq., was called to the Chair, Samuel D. Jackson acting as Secretary, the following resolutions were submitted by Prosper M. Wetmore:

Resolved, That the cordial acknowledgments of the Corps of Aids are due to General Robert Bogardus, Grand Marshal of the Procession, for the urbanity and courtesy which distinguished his intercourse with the Civic Staff, on the recent occasion of rendering funeral honors to the memory of the late President of the United States; and also for his prompt, energetic and efficient conduct in the discharge of his official duties, evinced in the fact that the entire civic procession was in readiness to move at the precise moment indicated in the programme of arrangements.

Resolved, That a copy of the preceding resolution be transmitted to General Bogardus.

WILLIAM SAMUEL JOHNSON,
Chairman.

Extract from the Minutes.

At a meeting of the Civic Staff, held as above, the Grand Marshal in the Chair, it was Resolved, That the Staff unanimously return their thanks to the Joint Committee of the Honorable the Common Council, for the liberality of their arrangements, and for their prompt and courteous attention to the wishes of the Civic Staff.

ROBERT BOGARDUS,
Chairman.

Extract from the Minutes.

S. D. JACKSON, Secretary.

The following is the Requiem referred to in the above report of the Grand Marshal, which was written by George P. Morris, Esq., and sung at the conclusion of the ceremonies by the members of the New York Sacred Music Society :

Weep—for a spirit fled !—
The solemn word is spoken !—
Weep—for the silver-thread
And golden-bowl are broken !
A warrior lived—a Christian died !—
Sorrow should slumber in our pride !

Go—bring his battle-blade !
His helmet and his plume !
And be his trophies laid
Beside him in the tomb !
Where files of time-marked veterans come,
With martial tramp and muffled drum.

Give to the earth his frame !
'T was born but to decay :—
Not so his deathless name !
That cannot pass away !
In youth, in manhood, and in age,
He dignified his country's page.

Green be the willow-bough
 Where sleeps the hero now
 In consecrated ground.
 His monument his fame endears—
 His epitaph—a nation's tears.

Your Committee having been compelled by the state of the weather to dispense with the delivery of the Oration by the Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, have obtained from that gentleman a copy of the Oration, which, with the correspondence on the subject, is appended to this report.

Your Committee have thus discharged the melancholy though grateful duty assigned to them. They deem it unnecessary in conclusion to detain the Common Council by any remarks upon its character, or upon the considerations which its solemnity is so well calculated to suggest. They feel, however, that they would be wanting in their duty to their constituents, did they not acknowledge the promptness and alacrity, as well as the deep feeling of sympathy with which every portion of their fellow citizens have lent their co-operation in carrying out the proposed object. For a season, at least, the spirit of party was forgotten, and men of every shade of political sentiment vied with each other in rendering appropriate honors to the memory of the illustrious head of our Republic. The scene was full of material for reflection, and it is to be fondly hoped that its recollections may be hallowed by the prayer that, as in this instance, we have felt and acted as one people, we may even in the heat of party contentions not forget that we have a common interest in cherishing the memory of the great and good of our beloved country, and a common stake in the welfare and perpetuity of her institutions.

In conclusion, your Committee beg leave to express their thanks, and they doubt not those of the Common Council, to the Grand Marshal and his Aids, to the military, and civic bodies, and citizens who united with them, upon this melancholy and interesting occasion, for the efficiency with which the proposed arrangements were carried into execution, and for the readiness and alacrity with which they responded, in every instance, to the wishes of the Committee, in giving effect to this solemn and imposing pageant.

Respectfully submitted.

Alderman Nash moved that the reading of the minutes be dispensed with, which was adopted.

The following communication was then received from his Honor the Acting Mayor, informing the Board of the death of General WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, late President of the United States :

MAYOR'S OFFICE, APRIL 5TH, 1841.

To the Board of Aldermen :

GENTLEMEN—It becomes my painful duty to announce to you the melancholy intelligence of the death of General WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, late President of the United States : an event sudden, solemn and afflicting to the nation.

Of his services, civil and military, it is unnecessary for me to speak : they are identified with the history of our country.

I should do injustice to my own feelings, and to the station which I temporarily fill, were I not to partake of the general gloom that pervades the community, which mourns the loss of a Chief Magistrate, recently called from peace and retirement to preside over the destinies of a nation of freemen.

I respectfully suggest that such measures be taken as will evince the respect and affection due to one who has occupied so exalted a station, and shared so largely of the public confidence.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, yours, &c.

ELIJAH F. PURDY,

Acting Mayor.

The same having been read, Alderman Smith rose, and after making some appropriate and feeling remarks upon the melancholy intelligence communicated by his Honor the Acting Mayor, presented the following resolutions :

Resolved, If the Board of Assistant Aldermen concur, that the Common Council of the City of New York have received with deep emotion, the afflicting intelligence of the death of General WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, President of the United States, and that while they sincerely sympathize with the family of the deceased upon the occasion of their sudden and melancholy bereavement, they cordially participate with their fellow citizens, throughout the country, in the grief which is felt at the loss of one who was endeared to the nation by the patriotism and fidelity of his public services, by the purity of his private character, and by the exalted station to which he had so recently been called by the voice of the American people.

Resolved, If the Board of Assistant Aldermen concur, that a suitable demonstration of respect for the memory of the late President, by the adoption of fitting solemnities, should be made by the public authorities and citizens of New York, and that a Committee of the Common Council, to consist of six members of each Board, be appointed to make such arrangements in that behalf as they may deem expedient.

Resolved, If the Board of Assistant Aldermen concur, that the Presidents of both Boards of the Common Council be requested to direct the chambers of their respective Boards to be hung with black, during the remainder of the term of the present Common Council, and that the members of each Board will wear the usual badge of mourning for the same period.

Resolved, If the Board of Assistant Aldermen concur, that his Honor the Acting Mayor be requested to communicate a copy of these resolutions to the afflicted family of the deceased, and to cause the same to be published in the newspapers of this City and of the City of Washington.

Alderman Benson rose, and after making some suitable remarks on the occasion, seconded the resolutions.

Alderman Graham made some appropriate remarks on the melancholy event; after which, the resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the President appointed Aldermen Smith, Benson, Nash, Graham, Hatfield and Woodhull, such Committee on the part of this Board, and the same were directed to be sent to the Board of Assistant Aldermen for concurrence.

The Board then adjourned.

SPECIAL MEETING, APRIL 10, 1841.

ALDERMEN—Calvin Balis—Caleb S. Woodhull—Daniel C. Pentz—Robert Jones—James Ferris—Josiah Rich—William Chamberlain—Freeman Campbell—Abraham Hatfield—Nathaniel Jarvis—Elias L. Smith—Samuel Nichols—David Graham, jun.—Peter Cooper—Orville J. Nash.

The President of the Board being absent, on motion of Alderman Smith Alderman Benson was appointed President pro tem., who, on taking the Chair, stated the object of the meeting.

On motion, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

Alderman Smith, Chairman of the Joint Committee of Arrangements, reported the following programme of arrangements for funeral solemnities in honor of the late President, WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, (see page 50,) which was adopted.

Alderman Smith moved that the Board now join the func-ral procession, which" was adopted, whereupon the Board took a recess for that purpose.

The ceremonies having ended agreeably to the programme, (except the prayer, oration and benediction, which were deferred on account of the unfavorableness of the weather,) the members returned to their chambers, all present as before, and resumed in order of business.

A motion was made that the Board adjourn, which was adopted.

SPECIAL MEETING.

BOARD OF ASSISTANT ALDERMEN.

Monday, April 5, 1841.

PRESENT—Frederick R. Lee, Esq., President, in the Chair; Messrs. Peers, Underwood, Halsey, Adams, O'Neil, Wood, Vandervoort, Leonard, Ward, Penny, Bradhurst, Westervelt, Spader, Davies, and Pollock; who, on the call of the roll, severally answered to their names.

The President arose and addressed the Board as follows:

But a few short months since, it became my painful duty to announce to you the decease of one of our associates, the Assistant Alderman of the First Ward; who, at a good old age, finished his course on earth, and I trust is now receiving the reward of a well spent life, in a brighter and better world.

Scarcely has the gloom which then pervaded this Board been dispelled, before we are again called upon to mourn the loss of the Chief Magistrate of these United States. WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON is now no more! Elevated as he was, to the highest office in the gift of the People, melancholy indeed is the reflection, that after the short period of one month from his inauguration to the most important situation in the world, millions of free and independent people are called upon to mourn his death. This sudden bereavement has cast a gloom throughout the nation, which time alone can eradicate. Unexpected as is the event, the only consolation left to his friends is, that their loss is his eternal gain. The last moments of his life were marked by calmness and resignation to the Divine will. He died, as a Christian should die, trusting in the promises of the Gospel, and relying upon the merits of a once crucified, but now ascended Saviour. He died actively engaged in the public service, closing his mortal labors as the President of the people, appointed by their free election. In his life he was patriotic and useful, and in his death expressed a fervent desire for the preservation of the principles of the Constitution.

This is the first instance since the formation of our Government, that the people have been called upon to mourn the loss of the great head of the nation. An overruling Providence has thought proper, for some wise purpose, thus to afflict us. "Mysterious are thy ways, oh God! and past finding out."

He whose death we now deplore, after serving his country year after year, both in the battle field and in the Councils of the Nation, at a period of life when men are usually desirous of retiring from public duties, when nearly three score years and ten had laid their burdens on his frame, he stood ready, at his country's call, to take command of a nation that is respected throughout the world; to guide and direct it in the defence of liberty and order. Justly may he be venerated and respected, and justly may his death be universally deplored. With us, indeed, it would be a disgrace did we not evince our respect for his character and our gratitude for his services: many did it while their friend was living, and I trust that all will show their attachment to the acknowledged head of the government, on the sad occasion of his death. He has gone to that "bourne from whence no traveller returns." The tidings of grief will resound throughout our land ; every city, town and county will re-echo the note of sadness, and will unite in their condolence with the family of the illustrious dead. They indeed need our sympathies and prayers—the aged partner of his bosom, who shared with him his sorrows and his joys ; who fondly anticipated meeting him, surrounded by a retinue of friends ; but, ah ! how changed the scene ! the solemn mandate has gone forth—they meet no more ! until the second coming of the Redeemer, in glorious majesty, to judge the world. He has now rested from his labors, and his best eulogium is the universal grief of the American people.

But I have done, and would only add, that I have convened the Board at this time, in order to enable you to adopt such measures as you may deem necessary upon this mournful occasion.

The following message was then received from the Acting Mayor, through his Clerk, John Ahern, Esq. :

MAYOR'S OFFICE, APRIL 5, 1841.

To the Board of Assistant Aldermen :

Adopted by the Board of Aldermen, and Aldermen Smith, Benson, Nash, Graham, Hatfield and Woodhull appointed the Committee on the part of that Board.

Unanimously concurred in, and Messrs. Wood, Davies, Pollock, Peers, Underwood and Penny appointed the Committee on the part of this Board.

On motion, the Board adjourned; and the President announced that this board stood adjourned until Monday, the 12th instant, at 5 o'clock, P. M.

BROOKLYN COMMON COUNCIL.

At a meeting of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, held on the 5th day of April, 1841, present his Honor the Mayor and a quorum of the Board;

The Mayor, in a very feeling address, officially announced to the Board the death of WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, President of the United States.

Alderman March offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Board have heard, with feelings of the deepest regret, the death of WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON, President of the United States.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed by his Honor the Mayor, to recommend to this Board the adoption of such measures as may be proper and expedient on this occasion.

Aldermen March, Oakley, Hart, Cross and Burbank were appointed said Committee.

On motion the Board adjourned.

At a meeting of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, called at the request of the Special Committee appointed as aforesaid, held on the 7th of April, 1841, present his Honor the Mayor and a quorum of the Board,

Alderman March, Chairman of the Special Committee to make arrangements in regard to the solemnization of the funeral obsequies of General HARRISON, made the following report, which, on motion, was unanimously adopted, and the proceedings of the Committee confirmed:

That acting in conformity with the understood wishes of the Board, they immediately met, in conjunction with appropriate Committees of the Honorable the Corporation of the City of New York, by whom they were most courteously received. The several Committees determined to act in the matter jointly, and accordingly agreed upon the resolutions dated April 6, 1841, signed by Elias L. Smith, Esq., the Chairman of the Joint Committees, and published in the daily papers.

The Committee further reported, that the mournful event was to be solemnized by a civic and military procession, on Saturday next; and that a funeral oration would be delivered in front of the City Hall, in New York.

The Committee further reported, that Aldermen March and Oakley were appointed members of the Joint Civic Committee, and that power was granted them to make such arrangements, on the part of the City of Brooklyn, as they might deem proper; that they acted upon the same by appointing General Underhill Grand Marshal of the City of Brooklyn, for the day of celebration, with power to confer with the different societies wishing to take part in the procession; to arrange the procession, and designate the line of march.

The Committee further reported, that Aldermen Cross and Burbank were appointed members of the Joint Committee to confer with the Military, and to make such arrangements as they might deem proper.

The Committee further reported, that the Reverend Doctor Cox, of this city, would open the services with prayer; the Honorable Theodore Frelinghuysen, Chancellor of the University of the City of New York, would deliver the Funeral Oration, and that the Right Reverend Bishop Onderdonk would conclude the services with a prayer and benediction.

The Committee further reported, that the Joint Committee were to meet on Thursday next, when the programme of the procession will be arranged, and of which due notice will be given.

Alderman March moved that the report be accepted, adopted, and placed on file; and also that their proceedings be confirmed, all of which were adopted. It was further

Resolved, That the members of the Common Council were the usual badge of mourning for sixty days, and that they recommend their fellow citizens to do the same.

His Honor the Mayor informed the Board that he had issued the following proclamation :

Whereas, By the dispensation of an All-wise Providence, the Chief Magistrate of these United States has recently departed this life ; and

Whereas, It is the acknowledged duty of a Christian people, as Christians, as patriots and as citizens, to respect the Chief Officer of the nation while in life; to pay a suitable respect to his memory when dead, and to make a right improvement of such dispensation of Providence, I do therefore most respectfully recommend to the Churches of all denominations in this city, to dress their pulpits, and other parts of their places of worship at discretion, in suitable mourning, on the next Sunday, the 11th instant; and request the Clergymen to make the services on that day appropriate to the occasion as circumstances and their convenience will permit.

Given under my hand, and Mayoralty Seal of the City of Brooklyn, this 8th day of April, A. D. 1841.

C. P. SMITH.

ORATION.

ORATION.

FELLOW CITIZENS—

The mournful occasion that has assembled us, is of surpassing interest and solemnity. Other bereavements are afflicting to our domestic and social relations, but this sudden and lamented death of our Chief Magistrate spreads a wider desolation, and awakens a nation's sympathies. Not a heart but felt the shock, nor a face that did not turn sad at the tidings. So much of interest and animation, of excitement and agitation, had prepared the way for his elevation, that the public mind had no place for forebodings or sober fears; and when in the midst of all the hopes that were cherished, after one short month, the blow fell, it made the nation tremble.

And, moreover, in the history of Divine Providence towards the executive officers of our government, there had been such uninterrupted benignity, that we were the more disposed to repress every apprehension. For while the messenger of death has thrown his darts among all other departments of society, never, until now, have we been called to render funeral honors to a deceased President. All around him, in the House of Representatives, the Senate and the Seat of Justice, victims had fallen, but the executive mansion had been spared. Perhaps the thought was rising into a measure of confidence that this exalted station was invested with peculiar immunities—that a mark so lofty would not range with the aim of the arrow. To-day, that illusion has vanished, and the charm is broken. We are shown with most impressive solemnity, that even there, where a nation's hopes are treasured up, there to fulfil the inscrutable purposes of infinite wisdom, death will make impartial visitation.

It becomes us my fellow citizens to mourn at this melancholy bereavement. God has spoken to us with loud and monitory emphasis. The standard bearer has fallen; He by whom kings and rulers govern—He who putteth down one and setteth up another, has inflicted the blow, and it behoves us to bow before Him, with adoring submission and humility of spirit; to make confession of our sins and implore his clemency, that mercy may rejoice against judgment.

It is wise for us thus to pause from the avocations of business, and ponder the lesson that is read to us—to inquire into the causes, to trace all the lines of this dispensation, and each devoutly commend its instruction to his own heart.

It is full of meaning. At a time of deep interest in the foreign relations of our country, when a collected and steady hand was never more needed—that hand is palsied in death. Let us realize our dependance on infinite goodness, when the thought comes over us, should other kindred dispensations follow, (and they do not always come alone,) what distraction, confusion and dismay might afflict our public councils: but I forbear—"In the day of adversity let us consider."

It is due to the memory of our venerable President, that we notice his personal history and character. He was born in Virginia in 1773. The time of his birth was auspicious: he came into life at that most eventful period when the principles of American liberty were to be vindicated by the last appeal of injured nations. He grew up to manhood amidst the soul-stirring scenes of the Revolution. All that was lofty and pure, all that was magnanimous and self-sacrificing, in the incidents of that struggle, formed the daily lessons of his childhood. He lived almost near enough to hear the indignant peals of Patrick Henry's eloquence, as he denounced the encroachments of oppression, and defied the threats of power. The first beatings of his pulse were quickened by the undaunted purposes, the invincible firmness, and the triumphant exultations of freemen.

In the Declaration of Independence that, on the 4th of July, 1776, spread before the civilized world the recital of our wrongs, and commended to the favor of God the assertion of our rights and the great principles of civil liberty, our lamented Chief Magistrate found a motive and a pledge to determine his own. Filial duty and his own willing and ready heart early enlisted all his energies on the side of his country: as that illustrious state paper maintained and plead her cause, he consecrated to her service the best feelings and profoundest veneration of his heart.

His honored father was a member of that exalted council of enlightened patriots that prompted, directed, and shaped the mighty scheme of our national independence. O! what a propitious and fruitful page for a generous youth. By those golden lines he was taught that in the estimate of American patriots, there was a boon so costly, that life and fortune and sacred honor were not too dear to pay and pledge in its defence—and that boon was liberty—rational, regulated liberty.

Such were the happy influences that swayed the early sentiments and formed the established character of General Harrison—and the scholar was true to his training. For through his whole life his love of country and fidelity to her welfare, have been the ruling principles of his conduct—accorded by friends and adversaries. As he approached the active duties of manhood, he cast his fortunes with the enterprising spirits that were destined to bring into the confederacy the noble States of the West; and there, as the counsellor, the friend, and father of them all, he lived to behold Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri bringing into the Union the power, resources, and teeming millions of empires, where, within his own memory no human sounds but the wharhoop broke the silence of universal solitude.

The first public notice of General Harrison is in November, 1791; and as his estimable and early friend, Judge Bennett, in his letters on Ohio, records of him—"Soon after the battle and defeat of St. Clair in 1791, General Harrison, then a subaltern in the army, was sent in command of a small detachment from Fort Washington to Forts Hamilton and Jefferson.

"It was in the midst of one of the severest winters ever known in this country. Subalterns were not permitted to march on horseback. Of course, this youthful hero, not then twenty years of age, marched on foot through the snow with his knapsack on his back; and although the woods were swarming with hostile Indians, he reached the place of his destination in safety, after as severe an exposure to frost, fatigue, and danger, as was endured at any time during the war."

He was after this elected the first Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Ohio, in 1799, and in the following year was appointed the first Governor of the Territory of Indiana. In after years he represented the State of Ohio, as a Representative, and Senator in Congress. In 1829 he was appointed by President Adams as Minister to Columbia.

In the second war with Great Britain, in 1812, when the dark hour of defeat and discomfiture spread terror through the Western borders, and the screams of the savage began to disturb the sleep of the cradle, he guided our North-western army with consummate skill and heroism, reassured the confidence of the country, and by the divine blessing stayed the threatened devastation of our frontiers.

In all these high trusts he has earned the praise of a faithful servant of his country. Corruption never stained his hand nor polluted his heart; and when he retired from the cares of office, it was not to indulge in the luxuries of wealth, but diminished in means by devotion to his public duties, he returned to his farm to partake of its simple and healthful productions, with the honest consciousness that he owed no debt to his country, but gratitude and good will.

He was a citizen soldier, a Christian patriot, a true hearted Republican, and an honest man. And until the waters of the Wabash and the Ohio shall cease to flow, the memory of William Henry Harrison will be enshrined in the gratitude of all posterity.

And when his name was presented to the American people for the first office in their gift, it touched a chord that thrilled on every fibre. It was vain to approach the temper that was inspired by the calculations of policy—the heart claimed its share in the question and rejected such counsels.

There was a conjuncture of incidents and recollections which imparted unwonted interest to the subject. It was the past coming back to us. It was neither politics nor party. It soared above them all. It was the free offering of the heart, flowing from its fulness. He had in his childhood stood side by side with our fathers. He had, in the freshness of his youth, enjoyed the smiles and been honored by the confidence of the Father of his Country.

General Harrison stood between the living and the dead—a bright link to connect us in bonds of fellowship, with the golden days of our history. He seemed to rest with one hand on the past generation, and with the other, to take hold of the sympathies of the present. So many lines of precious interest met in him that patriotism and gratitude, with overwhelming enthusiasm, laid at his feet, the first honors of a free and generous people.

A President of the United States could not approach the office under more friendly auspices than invited General HARRISON. The contest, though warmly maintained, had passed away; the agitations which it had excited had all subsided, and the prospect was cheered by the most hopeful promise. Indeed, in the character of the Presidential election, there had been a manliness, decorum, and respectful deference for law and order, alike hopeful for the future, and honorable to our institutions. But these, and more than these, could not avail to suspend or turn aside the Divine purpose: the decree had gone forth, and a morning bright as ever beamed from the heavens, long before noon was to be enshrouded with the shadows of death. The President lived long enough to grasp the gilded prize, to taste of its sweetness, if such it had, and to realize the anxieties that clustered around it—and death palsied the hand that held it.

And what painful proof meets us, of the utter vanity of earth's richest treasures. Detach them from connexion with immortality, and they are the veriest shadows, and designedly so. He who endowed this living spirit within us, never meant that its resting place should be found on earth—but we approach the truth so reluctantly, as to need these astounding providences to seal it home upon our hearts.

The late President, in his inaugural address, has alluded in terms of anxious interest, to the spirit of party as among the most fearful dangers to our liberties—when could an occasion be more solemnly suitable for us to improve the counsels of departed worth?

Political differences and personal preferences are incidental to free institutions; perhaps the healthful action of our government requires them. But let us differ as brethren of the same great fraternity, holding the same rights, bound by the same ties, and seeking the good of our common country.

Let us differ, with this day's affecting scenes fresh in our minds. The grave is a sacred composer of dissensions—how it smoothes the rough edges of conflict! how it rebukes the harshness of angry discussion! and no path of all these thousands but leads to the sepulchre. Let the prospect moderate our political controversies.

Let the world behold a spectacle worthy of freemen—that while we, without restraint, discuss the measures, and judge the officers of our government, we draw a line around the charities of life, that no strifes of party shall be permitted to invade or disturb.

There was another subject on which the President improved the opportunity of his induction to open his sentiments—and no pious mind could have made expression of them in happier terms. In the conclusion of his address, that had very properly developed the principles that should govern his administration, as if to impart emphasis to the whole, he proceeds: "I deem the occasion sufficiently important and solemn, to justify me in expressing to my fellow citizens a profound reverence for the Christian Religion, and a thorough conviction that sound morals, religious freedom, and a just sense of religious responsibility, are essentially connected with all true and lasting happiness."

Now that the honored lips which gave utterance to this conviction are sealed in death, it is most consolatory to his family, his friends and his country, to recall the occasion. Exalted to the very summit of earthly honor, surrounded by many thousands of his fellow citizens, who crowded to the Capitol to render homage to the man of their choice; all that was intoxicating in the splendid ceremonies did not tempt him either to forget his dependance on God, or to forego that public decided testimony to the value of the Christian Religion, and beyond all worldly plaudits its essential connexion with true and lasting happiness.

And the closing scene of the melancholy drama was in harmony with these elevated views. As the expected hour of dissolution approached, he calmly prepared to meet it with devout resignation and humble trust.

The consolations of that blessed Gospel which he had so lately commended, did not fail him in this crisis; and after committing his departing spirit to God, its latest anxieties while on earth were breathed forth in concern for his country and its Constitution.

It was a death such as a Christian Statesman might desire. He had just been entrusted with the Constitution; he had most solemnly invoked the divine blessing on his faithful purpose to preserve, protect and defend it; and now that God was about to summon him to other, and as we trust to higher and purer service, the last hour was consecrated to religion and his country.

Peace be to his memory. A nation's tears will embalm it.
